

Heritage Rochdale: Number One Riverside

The award-winning Number One Riverside is an impressive new home for council offices, the town's central library and its public information hub. In 2020 the building hosted Dippy the dinosaur, the Natural History Museum's touring diplodocus skeleton, in its imposing glass-sided atrium.

Sitting directly opposite the new Rochdale Riverside shopping and leisure complex, Number One Riverside is a light, airy and modern space and an attractive addition to the Rochdale skyline.

Number One Riverside is a multi-use public building which consolidates numerous council buildings into one, creating more efficient, joined-up services. The building also includes a conference and training centre, Bean Coffee Shop and office space for other organisations and private businesses.

Project Overview

Number One Riverside is a multi-use public building in Rochdale, Greater Manchester, England. It incorporates Rochdale Metropolitan Borough Council civic offices and customer service centre, Rochdale Central Library as well as conference facilities for community use and office space for third parties.
